

The strength of our college's success is rooted in the richness of our unique identities. If you were asked the question, "What are you?" How would you respond? How do you think others would interpret and respond to your answer? Can you make the match?

What I Am

6
As a woman, partner, mother, grandmother, educator, lifelong learner, and advocate I have learned: A child who is loved, gives love. A child who is valued, values others.

10
why is it important to know what we are? scientist, activist, teacher and writer lesbian, Jewish, mother and spouse I'm one who will always keep asking why? I've learned that often, the question is as precious as the answer.

11
I am like a tree, my roots were shaped by the Finnish culture, and the language of my heart is Finnish. However, the rest of the tree, trunk and branches: efforts of my adult life have all been produced in this country of individual freedom and in the appreciation of diversity.

2
I am bilingual and bicultural. As a youth, I grew up alone to my parents, brothers and sisters passing away in the Cambodian genocide. I am a product of a society full of devastation, together with revitalization, pride and joy.

3
I do not fit in one box. Let me explain. I am a proud Latina-White-Woman-Mother-Sister-Mentor-Speaker of English, French and some Spanish

4
I am Black, but judging from my appearance can you tell it so? Hard times and injustice tried to change me though. I shall never change! I will still remain... not the same as before, but doing more... because really... Isn't it Self Explanatory?

5
ELL, Basic Writing, and Comp Two In Literature and Writing I excel! Hard work and rewards come with each day through In Teaching and Learning I revel

7
Ethical, confidential, overachiever, dedicated, worker, passionate, feisty mother, caring Dean, engaged

8
Eurohispanic culture runs deep in my veins; yet new roots now grow.

9
I could place myself into many boxes- mother, wife, teacher, friend, and mentor. But these are roles which even cannot fully describe my essence. Fundamentally, I am a human being constantly striving to reach my highest potential.

12
I am a global woman, and I am a bilingual philosopher. I am always changing for the better.

- a Darcy Orellana
- b Margie Bleichman
- c Marja Leena Bailey
- d Priscilla Eng
- e Michelle Bloomer
- f Lindsay Vick
- g David Coleman
- h Alejandro Raja
- i Tooch Van
- j Pamela Flaherty
- k Nancy Tyler Higgins